COMPLAINT

JURY TRIAL DEMANDED

Plaintiff CAREER GROUP, INC., ("Career Group") by its attorneys, The Lustigman Firm, P.C., as and for its Complaint against defendants LORI B. ZASLOW, BRYAN J. ZASLOW and JONATHAN BETH CONSULTANTS INC. ("JBC"), alleges as follows:

NATURE OF THE ACTION

1. Plaintiff Career Group is an administrative placement firm. Defendant Lori B. Zaslow is a former senior executive employee of one of Career Group's divisions, fourthFLOOR Fashion. Prior to her start date, she signed an agreement promising to hold certain trade secrets in confidence. In violation of this agreement, Lori Zaslow began using Career Group's trade secrets to secretly compete with Career Group through defendant JBC, a corporation that, upon information and belief, she owns along with her husband, defendant Bryan Zaslow. Because of this competition and multiple other violations of her agreement, Lori Zaslow was a disloyal employee to Career Group. Records of her e-mail correspondences demonstrate that she was secretly passed e Career Group's trade secrets onto JBC. The Zaslows, through JBC, then proceeded to use these trade secrets to compete unfairly with Career Group.

FACTS RELATING TO ALL CLAIMS

11. Career Group is an administrative placement firm that searches for, screens, and ultimately places both temporary and permanent employees with the businesses that form its client base.

12. The fourthFLOOR Fashion division of Career Group specializes in matching employees with employers in the fashion, beauty, home furnishings, action sportswear and retail industries.

13. In order to satisfy the hiring needs of its clients, Career Group, including fourthFLOOR, has built and maintains a database of the resumes, requirements, preferences and contact information of thousands of persons in the industry.

14. Because the placement industry is a highly competitive one with many firms competing to serve the same employers, the ability to quickly provide a client with a pool of qualified potential employees is of crucial importance to Career Group in its quest to maintain a competitive edge over other firms.

15. For this reason, Career Group has expended many thousands of dollars to constantly enlarge, improve, protect and update its database of job seekers. This database is kept confidential and constitutes a very important trade secret of Career Group.

16. On or about April 27, 2005, Lori Zaslow signed a contract that provided for her at-will employment with Career Group's fourthFLOOR Fashion division ("the Employment Contract"). As part of that contract, she acknowledged and agreed that the terms of her employment were subject to all the terms and conditions contained in Career Group's Employee Handbook.

17. On or about May 2005, Lori Zaslow commenced her employment with Career Group's fourthFLOOR division.

18. Just prior to Lori Zaslow's commencement of employment with Career Group, Lori and Bryan Zaslow both represented to Career Group as follows:

(a) JBC's business was limited to "temporary placements and payroll solutions";

(b) during all of her time spent in Career Group's office, Lori Zaslow would not perform any work for JBC and would not use any Career Group resources for the purposes of JBC; and

(c) she would not directly compete with Career Group or any of its divisions.

19. Upon commencement of her employment with Career Group, Lori Zaslow further represented to Career Group as follows:

(a) she would never contact or solicit any person or business that, at the time of contact, was a former or existing Career Group client or applicant for the benefit of JBC;

(b) she would not perform any services whatsoever for JBC while employed by Career Group;

(c) for a period of two years following the termination of her employment with Career Group that she would not contact any of Career Group's customers, clients or applicants;

(d) she would not use or disclose any of Career Group's proprietary information and would not solicit or attempt to influence any of Career Group's customers, clients or applicants to divert or direct their business to any entity in competition with Career Group.

20. In relevant part, Career Group's Employee Handbook provides as follows:

CONFLICTS OF INTEREST

Employees have an obligation to conduct business within guidelines that prohibit actual or potential conflicts of interest. This policy establishes only the framework within which [Career Group] wishes the business to operate. The purpose of these guidelines is to provide general direction so that employees can seek further clarification on issues related to the subject of acceptable standards of operation. If you are in doubt, or if you engage in an activity that may cause a conflict of interest, information about the potential conflict must be reported to the Chief Executive Officer immediately.

An actual or potential conflict of interest occurs when an employee is in a position to influence a decision that may result in a personal gain for that employee or for a relative as a result of [Career Group]'s business dealings. For the purposes of this policy, a relative is any person who is related by blood or marriage, or whose relationship with the employee is similar to that of persons who are related by blood or marriage.

While it is impossible to list every circumstance that may constitute a potential conflict of interest, the following examples will serve as a guideline:

1. No employee shall do business, seek to do business or compete with [Career Group] nor own an interest in any person, nonpublic company, or corporation that does business, seeks to do business, or competes with [Career Group] .
2. No employee shall solicit or accept from any third party any direct or indirect personal benefit resulting from or in any transaction involving [Career Group].
3. No employee shall solicit or accept directly or indirectly any payment or loan whatsoever, or any service, gratuity, entertainment, travel, pleasure outing, gift, or favor from any third party or the representative of any third party doing business, seeking to do business or competing with [Career Group]. A reasonable exception is allowed during the holiday season when business contacts traditionally seek to recognize superior service given throughout the year.
4. No employee shall for the purpose of personal benefit make, use or disclose any information in his possession as a result of his relationship with [Career Group] whether or not such information is classified as confidential, nor shall he or she purchase or sell securities or other property, real or personal, based upon any information of [Career Group] or third parties received in the course of this employment, whether or not such information is classified as confidential.

21. Career Group's Employee Handbook defines confidential information to include the names of Career Group's clients, the contact personnel at such clients, the names, addresses and telephone numbers of job seekers who registered with or were seeking to register with Career Group, the applications and resumes of such job seekers and any and all leads received by any such job seekers.

22. With respect to disclosure of confidential information, Career Group's Employee Handbook provides, in part, that except as required in the course of employment with Career Group, the employee shall not disclose such confidential information without prior written consent to any third person. Career Group's Employee Handbook also states that disclosure of confidential information is grounds for disciplinary action up to and including possible discharge and legal action and that confidential information shall not be removed from Career Group's offices without the permission of the Chief Executive Officer.

23. At all relevant times, Bryan Zaslow and JBC were aware of the representations made by Lori Zaslow and her acknowledgment and agreement not to exploit Career Group's confidential information and trade secrets in any way.

24. Lori Zaslow did not have the permission of Career Group's Chief Executive Officer to take Career Group's confidential information and trade secrets.

25. Career Group made efforts to protect and guard the secrecy of its confidential information and trade secrets.

26. The information defined in Career Group's Employee Handbook and other information compiled by Career Group constitutes protectable trade secrets under the laws of New York and California.

27. With respect to conflicts of interest, Career Group's Employee Handbook provides, in part, that an employee shall not do business, seek to do business, or compete with Career Group. Career Group's Employee Handbook further forbids an employee from using or disclosing for her own personal benefit, any information obtained as a result of her relationship with Career Group, regardless of whether such information meets the definition of confidential information contained in Career Group's Employee Handbook.

28. With respect to electronic media such as e-mail, Career Group's Employee Handbook provides that all computers, voice mail, electronic mail, and data stored in Career Group's technology systems are at all times the property of Career Group. Career Group explicitly reserved the right to monitor such communications.

29. As part of her employment duties with Career Group, Lori Zaslow regularly dealt with, used and had access to Career Group's trade secrets.

30. While Lori Zaslow worked for Career Group, she secretly worked for JBC in violation of the foregoing agreement and representations.

32. Lori Zaslow's e-mails from her final months at Career Group also demonstrate that Bryan Zaslow and JBC had knowledge that she took Career Group's trade secrets and confidential information from Career Group and passed them onto JBC.

33. Upon information and belief, the Zaslows and JBC have exploited plaintiff's trade secrets and confidential information for their own benefit, thereby unfairly competing with and causing damage to Career Group.

34. As a result of the foregoing actions, on or about May 9, 2006, Lori Zaslow's employment was terminated by Career Group.
